

A Reading A-Z Decodable Book • Word Count: 258

Bread for Breakfast

DECODABLE • 54

Bread for Breakfast

Written by Brian Roberts • Illustrated by Angela Kamstra

“Hooray for short e words!”

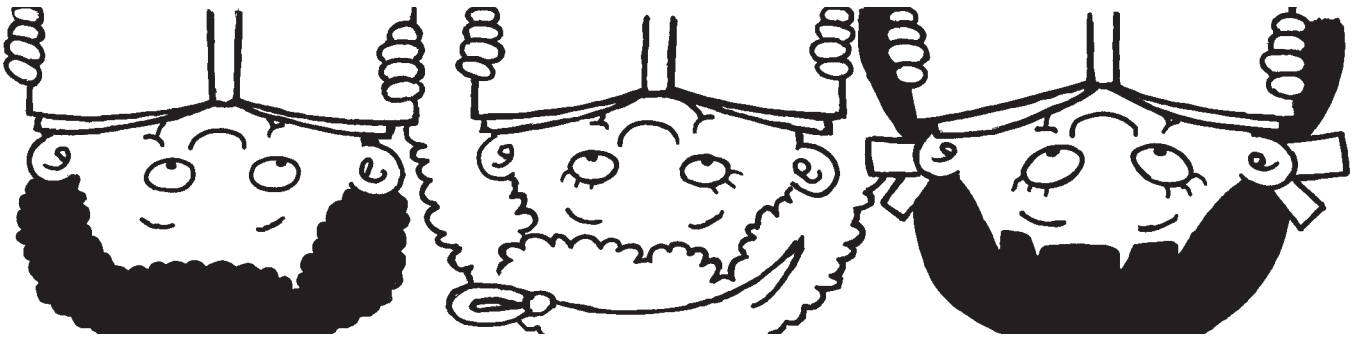

they said.

“Short e words are the best,”

dread, breath, and bleed.

They read short e words like thread,

Beth, Ned, and Meg like to read books.

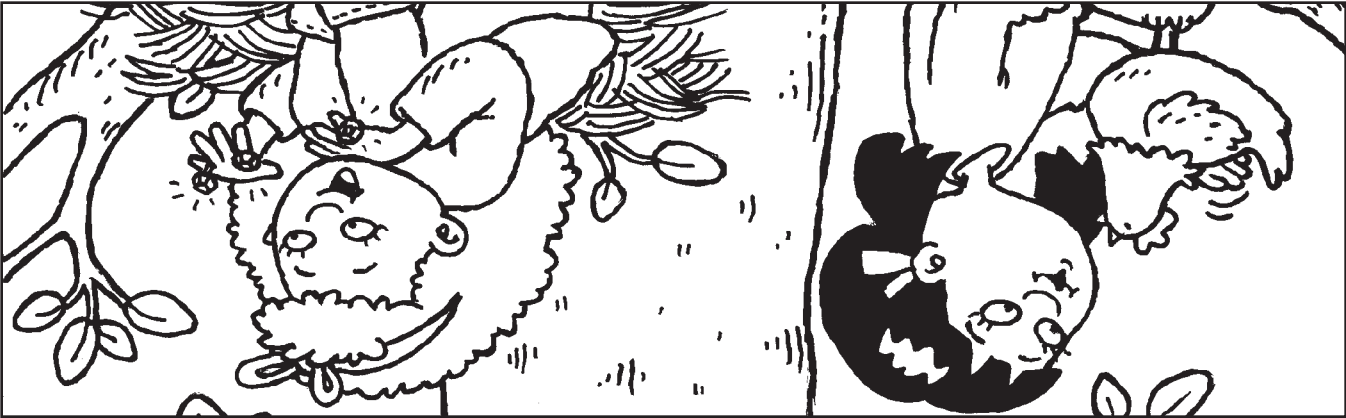

Bread for Breakfast

Written by Brian Roberts
Illustrated by Angela Kamstra

Meg likes hens with red heads and yellow legs.
Beth likes to put heavy gems on her fingers.
She likes to sit in a nest in a tree while she looks at her gems.

ELEMENTS USED IN THIS BOOK

New phonic element short /e/ digraph: ea

Words with new phonic element bread, breath, dread, head, thread

Reviewed phonic element short and long e;
consonant digraphs

Story words feather, finger, heavy, hooray, leather, short, sound, sweater

New high-frequency word yellow

Special considerations inflectional ending -s, -er;
plural ending -s;
two-syllable decodable words

Ned likes to play checkers and chess.
 He likes to play these games in a tent
 when the weather is wet.
 The words checkers and chess also have a short e sound.

Beth, Ned, and Meg have the short e sound in their names.

They like things that have a short e sound.

Breakfast is their best meal.

The word breakfast has a short e sound.

“I like to put a sweater over my green feather dress,” said Meg.
“We like sweaters with our leather pants,” said Ned and Beth.

“I like to eat bread,” said Beth.

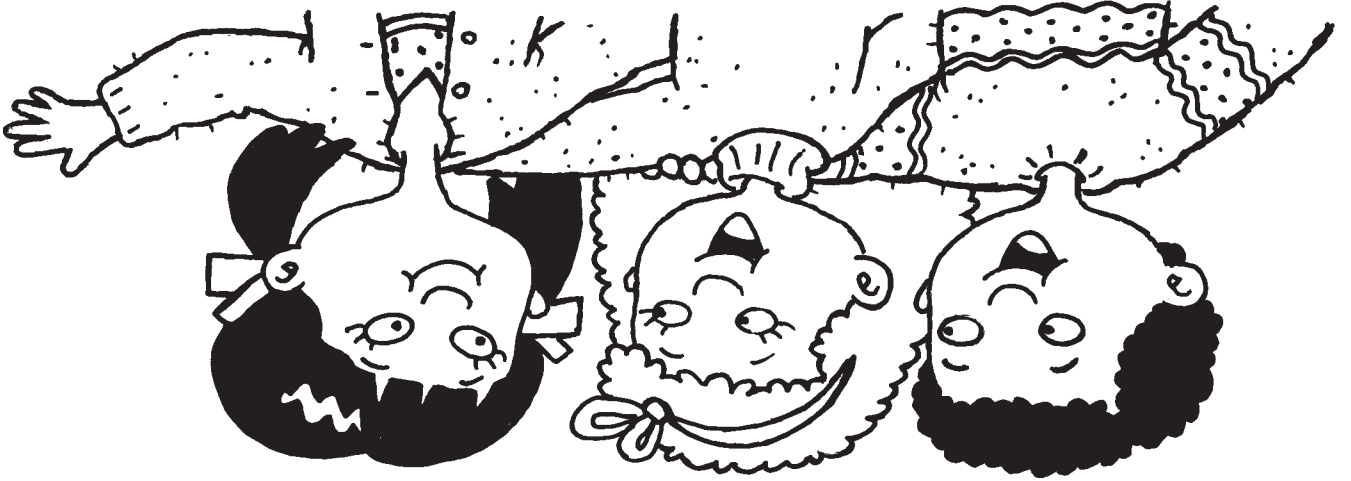

“Bread is the best.”

“I think eggs are the best,” said Ned.

“I like bread and eggs,” said Meg.

Beth, Ned, and Meg ate bread and eggs for breakfast every day.

Beth, Ned, and Meg put on their sweaters on Sunday.
 "Sunday is sweater day," they said.
 "And the word sweater has a short e sound."

Meg has a feather dress.

“Feathers are so soft and feel fine,” she said.

“The word feathers has a short e sound.”

Ned and Beth have pants made of leather.

The word leather has a short e sound, too.