

Reading A-Z

A Reading A-Z Decodable Book • Word Count: 256

The Roaring Storm

DECODABLE • 65

The Roaring Storm

Written by Brian Roberts • Illustrated by Brock Nicol

Now we all had a big chore.
We had to clean up the mess.
“No sports for now,” my dad said.
“We will have to work until we are all sore.”
He handed me a mop so I could mop the floor.

The Roaring Storm

Written by Brian Roberts
Illustrated by Brock Nicol

The rain had worn away a lot of soil.
 It had torn up trees and homes.
 It was all more of a mess than we thought.

ELEMENTS USED IN THIS BOOK

New phonic element r-controlled /ô/: or, oar, our

Words with new phonic element chore, corn, for, form, four, horn, more, porch, pour, roar, scorch, shore, soar, sore, sport, store, storm, torch, tore, torn, worn

Reviewed phonic elements diphthongs; variant vowels

Story words lightning, through

Reviewed story words floor, river, warning, water

Special considerations inflectional endings -ed, -er, -s, -ing;
 two-syllable decodable words

Then one morning it stopped pouring.
The water stopped roaring.
The store rested on the shore.

It was just after four when I saw storm clouds forming.
My mom told me to do my chores
before the storm came.

The rain kept pouring down.
It rained for more than four days.
Rushing water tore the store
and a house off the ground.

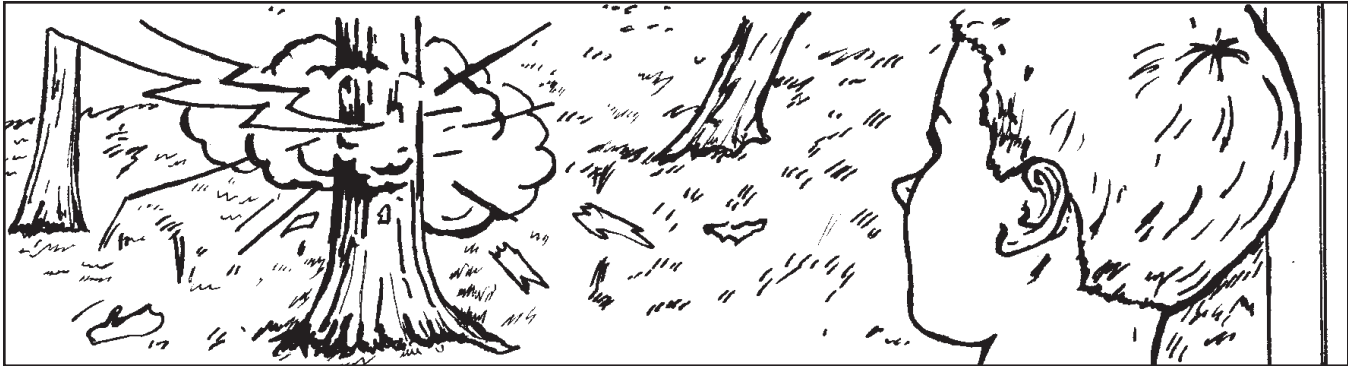

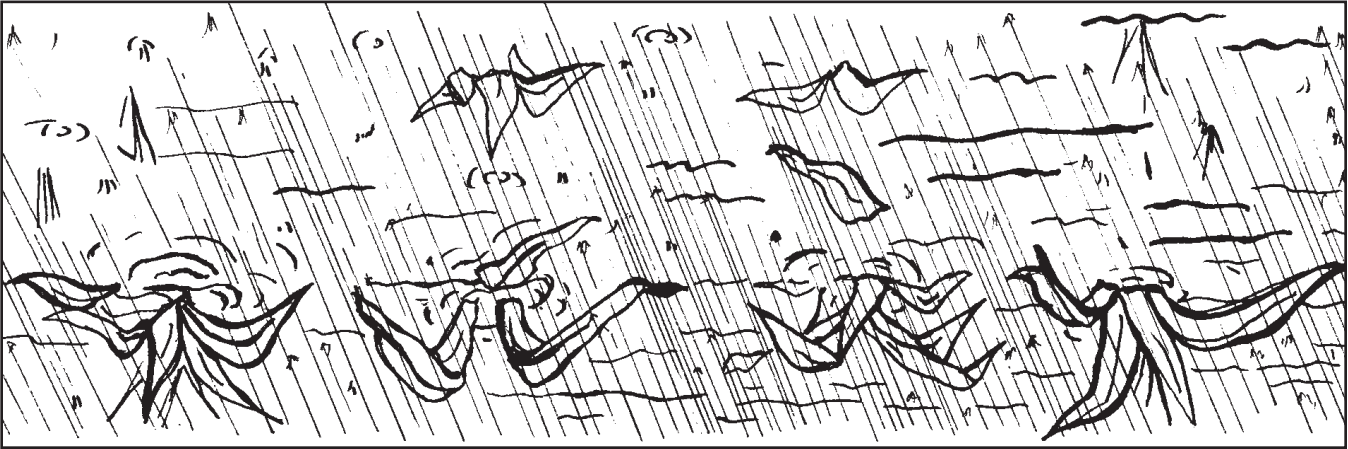

I went to the back of the house to do chores.
I looked up and saw the storm coming.
Then the storm warning horn sounded.

I ran to my house.
 I could see water rushing through the door.
 It spilled over the floor.
 "We have to leave!" yelled my mom.

I waited on the porch of the store
 next to our house.
 I saw big, black clouds soaring over my head.
 The wind began to roar.
 I ran for cover.

It poured and poured big raindrops.
 The water poured into the river.
 The river rose and soon reached the corn.

Then a bolt of lightning
 shot from a cloud.
 It hit a tree near the store.
 It was like a torch,
 and it scorched the tree.